

How can you become an Infant Massage Specialist?

First you must be a Massage Therapist or be enrolled in a Massage Therapy curriculum offering Infant Massage as part of the course.

In addition, there are two distinct environments you can pursue once you are a licensed Massage Therapist with the Infant Massage training.

1. Teaching other Massage Therapists Infant Massage for Certification.

If you are interested in becoming a Certified Infant Massage Instructor (C.I.M.I.), you will find the precise information you require at <http://www.infantmassage.com/>. That is the website for the International Association of Infant Massage. This course normally requires a two year internship to qualify you for your license to certify others in it. Since this information is subject to change without notice and it is not our website, please check for updates often.

2. Using the Infant Massage training in your massage therapy.

If you are a massage therapist looking for a class in Infant Massage in the central Florida area, please contact Benjamin Dillard, LMT at (941)-458-0021.

(The area code may have changed. If 941 does not work, try (239)

He is the excellent instructor who provided me with my training in Infant Massage.

We are mere practitioners; not instructors and cannot teach infant massage for certification.
